	`SVN Exported revision 353.`

	`running test script....`
	`compiling programs....`

compilation successful....

first test successful.  you appear to handle multiple packets in the window and using the timer to time multiple packets.

second test successfull.  you appear to have implemented cumulative acknowledgments correctly.

third test successful.  you've appear to have implemented timer interrupt to correctly handle multiple packets in the window.

You've passed all the simple tests.  Now stress testing with larger numbers of packets (checking sequence wrapping, corrupt ACKs.....).
 If this test fails, we will need to examine your submission more closely as you may not have fully implemented the parts.
 running fourth test.....

fourth test successful. Your implementation seems to be robust.
